THE GREAT MORTGAGE FRAUDS. It is remarkable that the exposure of the extraordinary crimes of JAMES E. BEDELL should be so soon followed by the discovery of a precisely similar series of frauds and forgeries committed by another trusted agent. Mr. WILLIAM R. FOSTER, jr., has been the counsel of the Produce Exchange and a member of that body for a number of years. He is absent from the city and no one seems to know where he is. Simultaneous with his departure it is found that mortgages to the large amount of $168,000 are forged and fraudulent, and have been palmed off on the Gratuity Fund of the Exchange as genuine.

These di-closures may well startle persons who hold this description of security, and no doubt the Register's office will be kept busy for some time examining deeds and mortgages. The facility with which the frauds seem to have been perpetrated is remarkable. Yet it is evident that very slight and ordinary care on the part of investors would lead to their detection. The great moneyed institutions of the city, which losn millions on bond and mortgage, make their own investigations, and trust to no single individual agent. With ordinary prudence in such transactions there can be no danger of imposition.

SELECT THE AUDIENCES.

Mr. BLAINE will speak at the Polo Grounds to-morrow. It is said that he is to deliver three speeches in this city during the campaign. He is pledged to tell our people all about labor in Europe, and especially about the sufferings of working men and women in England.

If Mr. BLAINE is to do missionary work for Protection, his addresses should not be heard only by the party leaders and ward politicians. The Committee of Arrangements should send tickets of admission to the first meeting to the wretched workingwomen garrets of the city tene. ment-houses, the white saves who toil for "protected" manufacturers from early dawn often until midnight and receive a shameful pittance, barely sufficient to support life.

To the second meeting the Committee should invite the alleged 100,000 unemployed men and women in the city who are willing to work but fail to find employment, first, because the "protective" duties on raw material cripple our own manufacturing, and next, because those "private affairs," the hateful Trusts, in limiting production to raise prices, close many of their factories and throw thousands out of work.

To the third meeting the committee might invite the unfortunate workers in mines and factories whose wages have been reduced to starvation point by their "protected" employers. But this would scarcely be of any practical utility, inasmuch as the I on Kings, the Coal Barons and the millionaire manufacturers have imported so many cheap contract laborers from foreign countries that such an audience would be unable to understand the speaker. So the third address might be enjoyed by those who believe that Trusts are private affairs with which no one has any particular right to interfere, and who are ready to shout themselves hoarse in honor of Premier BLAINE.

A VICTIM OF CIRCUMSTANCE.

Mankina is often the victim of circumstances. When a young husband and father sails for Europe alone, leaving his family behind him, and as soon as the steamer gets fairly outside and the pilot has sailed away, finds a lone and interesting female acquaintance on board, who throws herself, not into his arms, but onto his generosity, and asks protection during the voyage, what is he to do? He cannot get rid of her. There is no stopping-place or half-way house where he can have her set ashore. He has before his eyes the horrible vision of a scandal, a heart-broken wife and intermeddling " friends," who roll the delicious morsel of gossip round their tongues with spicureau reliah. He might jump overboard or throw his troublesome fellow-traveller into the sea. But the former would be folly and the latter return home by the next steamer. Miss MAY DOUGHERTY, the thoughtless traveller, determined to follow this advice. She cabled her parents, who were ignorant of her whereabouts, as soon as she reached the other side, and is to return at once.

Thus ends a romance which has been by no means a pleasant one for its principal characters, and which might have been at tended by serious consequences. When Miss MAY DOUGHERTY goes to Europe again let us hope it will be under more propitious cir-

Emigration Commissioner STEPHENSON is low on the right road to the reform of Castle Garden methods. He proposes to "bounce" BARNET BIGLIN, who has so long made money out of the handling of the immigrants' baggage, and to employ in the Garden the responsible New York Transfer Company which will render better service at less cost. Mr. STEPHENSON has been instrumental in breaking up the Railroad Pool and in stopping Mormon immigration, which has been tavored by Commissioner Fornest.

Whenever a crime is committed of unusual rocity or sensational character, some crank s always found ready to accuse bimself as the culprit. This is a singular feature of mental delusion. MR. ROURKE'S VIEWS

The Issues as They Appear to a Republican "B'hoy."

He Thinks Hill Is the Strongest Man in the State.

Cleveland's Majority in This County May Reach 55,000.

Bernard J. Rourke was found by an Even-ING WORLD reporter at his big saloon in Forsyth street.

To him the reporter said : "The opinion of practical politicians on the stirring questions now uppermost in the mind of all Americans is more valuable than that of the man who is not in he swim. Therefore I ask you, how is the approaching national election going? Mr. Rourke, who wields a mighty powerful hand in the Republican politics of the Eighth Assembly District, replied promptly : ." Harrison is going to win." Then smilingly: You know most folks believe as they want things to go."

"What is, in your opinion, the principle article of Harrison's strength? What a gument is it that brings most votes to h.m?"

"Oh, this protection—whatever that may mean. You know the people want protection."

Then Mr. Rourke said something which he Then Mr. Rourke said something which be didn't want the reporter to print, and, in deforence to his wishes, it is omitted.

"What of the tree whiskey plank in the Republican platform?" asked the reporter. I am opposed to that, Whiskey is a luxury and should be taxed. But you and I know that it won't make much difference who wins; whiskey will never be free."

"Will you carry New York State?"

"I think Harrison will get this State."

Of the prospect in this city, do you think it lo ks favor ble to the Republicans in case of a three-cornered fight?"

"No. I think Tammany Hall would win in a three-cornered fight, It is the most powerful political organization in the city. More power ul than it ever was before."

"There has been some talk of an independent nomination of Mr. Hewitt and a Republican indersement. What do you think of that?"

Mr. Rourke's face spread into a sardonic

"I would not tayor that. Hewitt is no Republican. The Republicans have talked of Cornelins Bliss and John W. Plummer for Mayor. I think Bliss the strongest man. Mayor. I think Bliss the strongest man.

But Tammany Hall would win with Judge Dugro or Grant or O'Donohue.

"What of the Irish vote;"
"I don't think the Irish Blaine vote will change much. I think it will go pretty sirs ght for Harrison, eithough the Irish Independents have come out for Cleveland.

"Devoy and Ford and the rest of the old leaders are out for Harrison."

"What about Indiana, New Jersey and Connecticut?"

'Now, Mr. Rourke, you have said that you beli-ved Cleveland's majority in New York County would be 55,00° and Hill's 65,000, but you say the managers claim 110,000 votes for Harrison. How do you reconcile those points? If Harrison gets 110,000 there will be at most only 130,000 or 140,000 left for all the other candidates."

'Oh, well, I don't go into figures like that. I look about and see how things are looking. I know what the majority was last yer and the year before. I didn't say I thought Harrison would get 110,000. May be those who have figured that out know better than I do. i think Hill is sure to be elected because he is the most popular man in the State. I think he is stronger than Cleveland."

Is Marringe a Fallure ?" and " Is Bach elerhood a Success ?"

To the Editor of The Evening World: "Jersey City Heights" has got the correct idea in her fetter on 'Is Marriage a Failure?" and from a husband's standpoint I indorse every word therein contained.

Marriage can be made either a blessing or s curse, with no middle course. To me it was the latter for nearly the first five years of my married life, partially on account of the in-termeddling of the families on both sides and partially on account of my own bad habits and consequent lack of proper attention to my wife.

and consequent lack of proper attention to my wife.

For the past four years my domestic affairs have been entirely revolutionized, I being now far removed from all disturbing ele-ments, and living only for my wife and chil-dien, whom I have rea on to look upon as nearly perfect as can be, and on the r part I know the feeling is reciprocated to the fullest extent.

Mutual confidence and forbearance between husband and wife is the grand secret of success. Consequently married life to me, for the past few years, has been full of bless-for the past few years, has been full of blessing, and the only life that I consider worth living.

The wine, whiskey and beer bottle is a thing of the past with us, and our home, when I am there, is a little heaven upon earth. Unfortunately I am not so much at my home as I would like, being a commercial traveller, but when I am "on the road" my business and family are ab ut all I think of, and there is no place half so sweet to me as my own little fourteen doilar flat in my own little fourteen-dollar flat in ASTORIA.

A Handsome, But Sceptical Tramp.

To the Editor of The Evening World: In your editorial you say a man who lives bachelor's life certainly is not a success. I beg to differ with you. I am a bachelor of for y and certainly as happy as the average married man, and much more so than many who have charming and talented wives and who have charming and talented wives and lovely, interesting children.

The wives by their extravagance, self-shness and conceit, and the children, by their children, by their children, by their children, by their love of dress, pride and sometimes bad talenter, render the unfortunate husband and falter anything but a happy man. Where there is one family united and pulling together, thereby making the man who is its head perfectly happy and contented, there are dozens that cause men to take their hat and leave home abruptly, so as to have peace and quiet. and quiet.

The cases in the divorce courts, the public scandals, the items in the newspapers that we see daily, have not a tendency to make a happy bachelor very anxious to seek matri-

I know there are a great many very happy homes in this country, as well as ab oad; but I sincerely believe that in the majority of cases marriage is not what it is cracked up to be. I honor and respect a good housewoman, an interesting, good-tempered child, and a moral, home-loving family man, but I am sorry to say I think hey are like angels' visits, "few and far between."

The Handsome Tramp.

It Depends on Conditions To the Editor of The Evening World,

Marriage is a " condition, not a theory, in the words of Grover Cleveland. To make it a happy condition there must be character developed on the part of both husband and wife. And the proportion of happiness, all other thin, s being equal, will be in direct ratio to the development of their characters. The failure of marriage in the great ma-jority of cases is not due to the rite as in-stituted, as Mrs. Caird would have us beleve, but o the want of stability of the con-tracting parties. The same applies to every department of life. There are failures in department of life. There are failures in everything around us.

The great mass of the people are ruled by circumstances, while the few make circumstances contribute to their happiness as well as their success.

Entering marriage with high ideas and lofty purposes and with a determination to make it the highest and noblest condition of devoted manhood and unsulfied womanhood, the chince of failure is not very small.

I am myself a young man of good expects.

I am myself a young man of good expecta-tions, minus bad hebis, with no prententions to the dude, and will perhaps one day change my estates if I can get my high ideal of a woman to condescend to become the life partner of so commonplace an individual

I often see this and enjoy it as much as if it was all for me. Further, I find a woman many a good man.

I fail to see where the failure comes in. If I fail to see where the failure comes in. If such be the case, it is often the man who is at fault. He likes to go out alone, to his lodge or elsewhere. The wife expects him to take her out on that evening. She is disappointed, and all of it is, of course, wrong and war may be declared. Let this be for the meaning and make up and things will run smooth; but do not repeat it.

Let man and wife share their pleasures and

Let man and wife share their pleasures and the man and wife snare their pleasures and tribulations together, and they will find themselves a happy set.

So, young men, do not let this word failure discourage you. Seek for the right one, learn to know her well, try and do all you can to please her, and you will be happy.

Commending the Kindred Topic, To the Editor of The Evening World:

'Is Bachelorhood a Success?" suggests the EVENING WORLD as a theme of discussion, being a di version from the query " Is Marriage a Failure ?" Many agree, no doubt that the controversy on marriage has not and would not be shared by those blessed with happy homes and not wishing to wake the acred relation in life a subject of public discussion.

subject of public discussion.

They are justified in remaining silent on that topic, but on a discourse such as is now suggested by our favored evening paper there can be no delicacy of feeling, only a will to jo n in giving a free and frank expression of thought, and advice to be regarded according to its worth. A free exchange of opinions will do much as a director to the proper course.

Is This True, Buchelors ?

Every old bachelor may think marriage failure until one day his fate will bring hun face to face with a girl who is not beautiful, who does not know how to superintend a household, but who can support him.

An affix to her name, which will enable him to retire from bu iness, which is so tedious to him, will be a much greater attraction than beaut. But, as these girls are rare creatures nowadays, men prefer to remain old bachelors.

Great Celebration of the McGlynn Birth day Marked Last Night's Session of the Big Fair in Madison Square Garden-Some of the People Was Sat at the Richly Laden Banquet Table.

Thousands of bright-eyed damsels crowded into Madison Square Garden, at the Anti-Poverty Fair, last night. Their merry laughter rang out cheerily above the cries of the share-seekers, and their silvery voices blended with the music rendered by Prof. McAuliffe's orchestra.

Gallant young men promenaded about the decorated garden with fair, young adherents of Anti-Poverty gracefully beaming on their arms, and pretty lips pouted as they pleaded with these same young men to take shares in the many articles exhibited on the numerous seem to show a slight abatement of the yellow fever in this city, but when it is reflected that there are not more than seven to eight thousand persons remaining here and that 2,450 of them have already been down with the malady, the decrease in the number of new cases and deaths from day to day will be seen to be only in proportion to the decrease in the number of possible victims.

Three out of four of the new cases are co'ored, and more than that proportion of deaths are among the colored population. This is because the colored people are ignorant and fail to follow the directions of the physicians, eating implied entity and not taking proper care of themselves. Then, too, the colored people have a theory of their own as to how to fight the disease. They doen themselves at the first appearance of the disease, taking enough castor oil and quinine to use up a white person and then sweat themselves by wrapping in heavy blankets and lying by a hot fire. This plan is frequently successful, however.

The Cubans and Italians, who have had much experience with the disease, have a secret remedy of their own, and look with contempt on the system of the physicians here.

Mr. King-Hall, THE WORLD special correspondent, passed a good night, and is doing nicely. He has never for an instant lost his grasp on life and interest in what was going on about him. The greatest hindrance to his speedy recovery will be his measuress and desire to be up and about his work again. It probably looks singular to Northerners that the authorities here should be so anxious to keep out people from other points. Money Still Pouring in for the Comfort of the Stricken Southern P ople.

The blanks sent out by THE WORLD among the clerks and other employees of big business places are constantly coming back with grailying additions to the yellow fever relief fund. The grand total of contributions to the paper's fund to-day reached the sum of $3,550.36.

Very successful were the various perform-ances tendered yesterday and last evening for the benefit of the fund. Distinguished thea re parties attended the matines at Wallack's and the Casino. The "Nadly" performance ne ted over $1,000, and the proceeds at Wallack's were estimated at $2,100.

INSPECTOR STEERS'S DAY.

Congratulations and Presents on His Thirty-fifth Wedding Auniversary.

When Inspector Steers reached his office at Police Headquarters this morning he found on his desk a choice collection of flowers, including dahlias in every color from the Mount Hope farm of Sergt, James K. Price. Other and valuable gifts were sent to Mrs. Other and valuable gifts were sent to Mrs. Steers, including flowers from Mr. and Mrs. Other Mearer, flowers and bronzes from their son-in law, Charles H. Holland, flowers from Leo Schlessinger, silver from Jacob Leversburg, flowers from Capts. Oarpenter, Allaire and half a dozen other captains, silver from Supi. Murray, and other pleasing gifts. All this was in honor of Inspector and Mrs. Steers's thirty-fifth anniversary of their wedded life. This morning the Inspector surprised Mrs. Steers by presenting her the deed of the new Queen Anne cottage on One Hundred and Fif y-second street, which he bought for her. The deed was inclosed in a beautiful hammered silver ca-ket.

Collector Magone to Reconsider the Cases of Two of the Mormon Families

The cases of two of the Mormon immi grant families, those of Nicholas Egli and Herm nie Leuwen, were this morning referred back to Collector Magone by the Commissioners of Emigration, Supt. Jackson sending the affidavits to the Collector, who sending the affidavits to the Collector, who may revoke his order for their return. Both Egii and Leuwen have railroad tickets for Utah, and have made oath that they have money and will not be a public charge.

Under such circumstances it is not thought likely the Collector will cause their return to Europe, as it would be a violation of the law to do so and would render him or his bondsmen personally liable. The Government itself cannot be sued.

JERSEY CITY NEWS.

Mrs. King Again Looms Up, This Time for
